Group Protests Tree-Cutting

A large group of Georgetown citizens were on hand at a meeting ready to confront officials from McDonald Hamburgers. They were concerned about reports that some big oak trees at the intersection of US 81 and Williams Dr. are about to be cut down. The confrontation never came about as the hamburger officials didn't show up.

Rattlesnake Bite Fatal

A Williamson County child died Monday of an apparent rattlesnake bite. The two-year-old was with her family on an outing on a ranch near Leander and was sitting near a big rock beside a cave when she was bitten on the back. Upon examination, two bleeding fang marks were found on her back, about two inches apart. She died in an Austin hospital.

Decoration Contest Opens

Somerville-Lyons residents are being invited to enter a Christmas decoration contest. The contest will be divided into two categories: best door decorations and best Christmas theme. Winners will be announced at the Christmas parade on Dec. 17.

Ambulance Bills Overdue

Rockdale city council members instructed the mayor to sign a contract with a firm to collect delinquent ambulance accounts with the contract stating that the company's collection commission rate schedule would be determined by the date of last payment made by the debtor.

Champion Is 81

The Thorndale Champion, which asserts that it is one of the county's oldest surviving newspapers, is celebrating its 81st birthday Sunday. The newspaper's celebration comes 81 years after the first printer cranked out the first edition of the Thorndale Enterprise in a hand press in 1896.

Cattle Prices Up

Cattle prices took a turn for the better Wednesday at the Lampasas Livestock Auction as a few hi-choice feeder steers and bulls sold for up to 52 cents a pound and lightweight good and choice feeder steers and bulls sold for 46-1/2 to 53 cents a pound.

Cotton Marketing Is Last Chance For Telcot Signup

By Robert E. Glodt Jr.
County Extension Entomologist

A very important Cotton Marketing meeting will be held in Taylor on Monday, December 12 at Rudy Mikeska's Bar-B-Que at 7 p.m.

Larry Porter from the Plains Cooperative Association will be on hand to answer specific questions concerning how the Blacklands cotton producers can benefit from the new Telcot system.

This new system of marketing cotton has already been adopted in every cotton producing area in Texas, except the Blacklands. The main objective and advantage to the Telcot system is that participating farmers in the Blacklands will have access to 80% of the cotton buyers in the United States.

Growers can get bids on their cotton, put the cotton up for sale at a fixed price (grower decides the price), or cotton can be contracted through this system.

At the present time, cotton is the only commodity that is marketed through Telcot, however, the system is flexible enough to be used in the marketing of all agricultural commodities in the future.

In order for Blacklands producers to be included in this new marketing program, enough producers and acreage in the Blacklands must be interested to make the effort worthwhile. This will be the last meeting and the last opportunity to establish this program in the Blacklands. If enough growers do not participate in the program, the Blacklands will not be able to adopt the Telcot marketing system this year.

This system is only a tool to help growers receive the best possible price for their crop. Growers are not committed to sell their cotton through Telcot even if they participate in the program.

For specific details concerning the Blacklands Cotton Marketing Association and Telcot attend the meeting in Taylor on December 12 or call Kenneth Johnson in Hutto. If you have questions, get the straight answers and come to the meeting.

It doesn't do much good to keep the "bugs off your cotton" if the price you receive is too low to make a profit!

Bloodmobile To Visit Cameron

Blood program officials are urging all donors and prospective donors to remember the bloodmobile visit which will be Wednesday, Dec. 14 from noon until 6 p.m. at Methodist Fellowship Hall.

Christmas time is near and most of us are rushing to find the right gift for everyone. Sometimes in the rush we get an uneasy feeling that we've missed the point of Christmas. Giving blood is one way to enter the holidays with a warm glow, knowing that you have given the best gift of all.

At this time of year, the weather worsens, travel and traffic increases, and we see illness and accidents mounting. Fires and other accidents cause situations that create a need for blood to spoil Christmas for someone.

At the same time each year, the supply of blood at the Red Cross Blood Center is low. We know that every ounce of blood used in any emergency is provided by another person. Someone must donate it, and it must be on hand when needed.

Cameron has never failed to respond generously to the blood drive, although in recent months it has not met its 73-unit quota. So please, regular donors and others who would like to start giving, don't forget Wednesday's bloodmobile visit, and give something that may save a life.

Tennyson Featured In Calvert Show

A major art show "Paintings From Five Countries" is being held in Calvert at the Cotton Blossom Antique Shop and Art Gallery owned by Pauline Burnitt this weekend. The show opened December 9 and will continue through December 11. Hours are from 1-6 p.m.

The work of the featured artist, Rachael Tennyson, is downstairs and is displayed among antiques and original cases of the building in its days as a "Gay 90's" mercantile store.

Miss Tennyson is the great granddaughter of the poet Alfred Lord Tennyson. Her father, Alfred Browning Stanley Tennyson, was the Godson of Robert Browning. Her mother, Margaret Cecily Drummond Tennyson, claimed the Scottish poet William Drummond of Hawthorn's Den as one of her ancestors.

Her career began as a portrait photographer, having trained with the Court Photographer, Dorothy Wilding. During World War II, she was a WAAF Photographer in the Public Relations Department of the Air Ministry. She was later employed by Gordon Anthony, renowned for his ballet photographs.

Miss Tennyson studied in London and did advanced study in France and Italy.

Her awards include the Aldershot Festival and Guilford, England, as well as Southampton. Her work is in private collections in New Zealand, Australia, and the Sudan. She has exhibited in galleries, Lincoln and Southampton.

She was assistant professor in the art department at Baylor University from 1956 - 1959. She has also taught art in Menorca and in England.

Miss Tennyson paints in the kitchen of her Spanish home on the Island of Menorca, Spain. She is a disciplined artist. She delights in the fantastic rocks and vivid colors of her island home. She had access to the museums she loves on her trips away from the island. But on Menorca, she lives an unsophisticated life.

Miss Tennyson reveals her philosophy by saying "I have a reverence for the eternity of nature. By looking, I hope to understand something of its complexities and wonders. I try to reach beyond superficialities. I want to share in my work what I have discovered, be it little or much."

Her style of working is somewhat impressionistic with a strong feeling for the subtleties of design and yet perfectly capturing objects, detail, color, texture, but, above all, life. The paintings reflect a definite love for the subject and a desire to capture and reveal it to those who view the

Overview, 1978:

Zero-Based Budgeting....

In late January, 1978, President Carter will send his budget recommendations for fiscal year 1979 to Congress. The 1979 budget is now being prepared using zero-based budgeting, a process the President promised during the Campaign to apply to the federal system once elected.

OVERVIEW

I. What it is.
Fulfilling one of his campaign promises, on February 14, 1977, President Carter asked the heads of executive departments and agencies to establish zero-base budgeting within their organizations to prepare the fiscal year 1979 budget. The President originally made this a campaign pledge because of the success of the zero-base budget system adopted by Georgia when he was governor from 1971-1975.

Zero-base budgeting is a management process by which all budget requests are justified by first evaluating every activity of an agency, and then ranking these operations in order of priority.

Administration officials say that use of the zero-base budgeting system will:

Focus the budget process on a detailed examination of the objectives and needs of the agencies;

Combine planning and budgeting into a single process;

Encourage managers to evaluate in detail the effectiveness of their work;

Allow managers at all levels of the federal government to participate in planning and budgeting;

Shift the focus of the budget process towards more effective programs within a strict budget, rather than through budget increases.

II. How it works.

In general terms, this is how zero-base budgeting works.

The first step in zero-base budgeting is to identify the activities performed by the agency, the person responsible for performing each activity, and the major objectives of the activity. This is an essential basic step to determine which managers are directly responsible for government projects, services and programs.

The next step is for each higher echelon manager to sit down with managers reporting to him or her to define groups of activities which have a common objective. These groups of activities are called decision units -- the basic division in zero-base budgeting. For example, a special milk program directed by the Department of Agriculture might be a single decision unit.

The third step is for each agency manager to collect and summarize information about the decision unit. This information should include:

Activities to be performed;
Objectives of the activities;
Measures of the performance of the decision unit;

Actual and projected costs;
Actual and projected personnel needed.

Once the information is gathered, it becomes possible to analyze the decision unit using standards like these:

Is it necessary for the government to continue to perform these activities?

Can the private sector do a better job of performing these activities?

Can the activities be performed more efficiently?

What changes would have to be made if funding for the activities were cut or eliminated?

Is a similar activity being performed by another decision unit? Should these activities be combined?

III. Decision Packages.

The next step is to develop a series of decision packages. A decision package is a brief paper that includes information necessary to make judgments about programs and budgeting needs. The first decision package shows the minimum level of funding and performance. Developing the minimum level decision package forces a manager to examine what would happen if funds for his or her activity were cut to an absolutely minimum "bare-bones" level. Additional packages are then developed showing the cost and performance for levels above the minimum.

Once decision packages are prepared for all the decision units the next step is for each manager to rank the packages in order of priority. The rankings are then submitted to the next higher manager, who reviews the work of several managers. This manager may revise the decision packages and will then develop a single ranking of all packages being reviewed. For example, a special milk program in the Department of Agriculture may be ranked by its priority with many other agriculture programs, such as water storage, soil conservation, and others.

Then, if the budget must be cut, the higher level manager could decide to retain all of the decision units at their minimum levels, or eliminate several and operate others at a higher level. This process requires managers to make important decisions about the performance of their projects, and what is essential to their operation.

This process generally continues until it develops into an agency-wide ranking of all decision packages. A particular level of effort of the special milk program would be ranked with all other Department of Agriculture decision packages in order of their priority.

Each agency head has the responsibility for determining the ranking by importance of major programs within their agencies. This ranking of programs and activities is then sent to the Office of Management and Budget for review. The OMB prepared its budget recommendations for President Carter. The President is actively involved in the review process with OMB officials, and he makes the final choices for major budget decisions. If budget changes are necessary, the OMB cuts funding for programs with the lowest priority first, using the rankings which the agency heads have developed as guidelines. OMB may also recommend changes in the priority ranking. The President then sends his final recommendations for the Fiscal Year 1979 budget to Congress.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q: Why is zero-base budgeting being instituted?

A: President Carter initiated zero-base budgeting to improve services for the taxpayer, and to be sure that every dollar spent by the government is used as efficiently as possible. Speaking to the Democratic National Committee Finance Luncheon on April 28, 1977, President Carter said:

"We have a means now to put into effect a new budgeting system called zero-base budgeting, that will let us go deep within the government as the 1979 Fiscal Year budget is prepared to eliminate unnecessary programs and to re-examine those things that are now accepted as imperious to criticism and scrutiny and analysis, and to bring them to the surface and look them over again and see which ones need to be continued, which ones enhanced, which ones reduced or abolished."

Traditionally, federal budgeting used past-year budget figures as a base amount which an agency generally expected to receive for the next Fiscal Year. Although good budget managers did look at base figures, often too little attention was paid to improving the efficiency of existing programs so they would cost less, and to examining whether certain activities should continue. Some agency planning was aimed at providing some of the benefits zero-base budgeting can provide. However, this planning often did not operate agency-wide and information was not gathered, analyzed and reviewed in a systematic way for all programs and activities.

In zero-base budgeting, the budget process for all federal agencies starts from zero -- no funding at all. The agencies must build their budget each year from the ground up, insuring that spending is as economical as possible.

Q: Will zero-base budgeting save money?

A: Yes, but that is not the primary objective. President Carter believes the greatest value of zero-base budgeting is at the lower levels of management within agencies. Zero-base budgeting involves more managers than ever before in the planning, budgeting and decision-making process. It makes managers reconsider their priorities, eliminating waste and unnecessary programs. The worth of zero-base budgeting as applied to the federal government will not primarily be in money saved, but in an increase in the efficiency of government services and projects.

Q: Isn't it true that much of the federal budget is "uncontrollable?"

A: Yes. About 75% of the federal budget is either "uncontrollable" (for example, interest which must be paid regularly on the national debt), or "relatively uncontrollable" (social security payments, veterans' benefits and many other expenditures to which the government is committed). However, the forecasted spending for many of these programs can be altered when the Congress enacts laws recommended by the President. Zero-base budgeting and other reform and reorganization plans in the future will effect these and many other government programs, not seeking to reduce benefits or services, but to make them more effective to control spending, and to keep a very tight lid on the budget. In this way, increased federal revenue eventually will match spending so that the budget will be balanced.

Q: Have other organizations tried zero-based budgeting?

A: Yes, and with good results in both the private and public sector. Before the federal government adopted zero-based budgeting, more than 100 state, local and private organizations were using the process. These include Texas, New Jersey, and Georgia; Wilmington, Delaware, and Garland, Texas; and parts of the Xerox Corporation and Texas Instruments.

Q: Did zero-base budgeting increase agency paperwork?

A: Yes. In the first year, zero-base budgeting has required long operative because more and better information about budget decisions is being produced than ever before. Agency managers have seen how their units function -- and how they should function -- for the first time in such vivid detail compared to the old process. As a result, managers are able to make more informed decisions about their budget requests.

you and the LAW

PRESENTED BY THE STATE BAR OF TEXAS

Q: My niece and her husband have been married several years. He is buying several pieces of land, but he has the property in someone else's name even though he makes the payments. What would she and the children be entitled to if he died?

A: In order for someone to claim ownership of property which has someone else's name listed on the title, a suit may be filed in district court of the county where the land lies. The purpose of the suit would be to present evidence to establish that the person named on the title merely holds the property in trust, or otherwise holds it, for someone else who has paid for the property and therefore owns it.

Q: May I buy a house from a good friend of mine based only on a verbal agreement and a handshake?

A: You may, but it would be extremely unwise. In order to prevent the contract from being voidable by your friend and to clearly set forth your rights and obligations and those of your friend in the transaction, the contract should be in writing.

Texas' Fall Fantasia...

Earl Campbell is the 1977 Heisman Trophy winner. The Longhorns are the No. 1 major college team headed for the Cotton Bowl and Notre Dame January 2.

The Dallas Cowboys are 10-2 and awaiting the playoffs in the National Football League.

It is a good year for Texas' fall fantasia.

The "Tyler Rose" produced these statistics: 1977 NCAA rushing supremacy with 1,744 yards, scoring 114 points on 19 touchdowns and all-purpose running of 1,855 yards.

A starter his freshman year at UT, an All-American fullback his sophomore year, injury-plagued his junior year, the 220-pounder started the senior year a question mark, returning to Austin in August carrying more than 240 pounds.

The deeply religious giant hung a plaque in his dorm room which said "Keep me going, Lord" and went literally for every meaningful running record NCAA posts ultimately will outstrip New York and California, who have peaked, plateaued and otherwise wearied of growth patterns.

We thank NEWSWEEK for not thinking of us as some stereotype of ourselves. Modern Texas is still brash, commercial and friendly, but it also is cultured, technocracized (pardon us, Webster) and future oriented.

It is kind and objective of Eastern establishmentarian press to acknowledge there is even more promise than bombast in so massive and modern a state.

He became Texas' first Heisman winner, the Southwest Conference's fourth. John David Crow, of TAMU, last won from SWC in 1957.

It was a great year for Campbell, almost singly delivering the scores behind a strong offensive line for U of T's undefeated regular season.

And among many good years, it is a good year for Texas football.

Acrylics, oils, ink washes, gouaches, and lithographs are included in the show. Prices range from $30 for a small pen and ink wash to $150 for an oil portrait called "the Huntsman." Two large nature studies in oil are priced at $225 each. The most expensive piece in the show is an oil portrait of Sir Charles Tennyson, O. B.E., who was another ancestor of Miss Tennyson. This painting has a price tag of $800.

Growing up with such outstanding people in literature for ancestors gave Miss Tennyson an appreciation for poetry and literature. Although she enjoyed poetry, she felt she could not compete in this area and chose photography for a career. She does enjoy going to the beaches where her famous great-grandfather once walked. A reception and cocktail hour was held immediately following the wedding ceremony, and was then followed by a seated dinner.

The bride's chosen colors of pink and hot pink were carried out in all of the decorations.

The bride's and groom's table was covered with a pink pleated cloth as were the head tables. The 4 tiered bride's cake was accented with shades of pink roses and was topped with a bride and groom. The chocolate groom's cake was surrounded with the bridesmaid's bouquets.

Social Security

Question: My doctor says I'm disabled. Does this mean I'm entitled to Social Security disability benefits?
Answer: No. While your doctor's opinion regarding your disability is an important consideration in deciding your claim, your doctor is not responsible for deciding whether you're disabled under the law. The decision is made by an agency of the state where you live.
In Texas, this agency is the Texas Rehabilitation Commission, Division of Disability Determination, located in Austin, Texas. In the state agency, doctors and others skilled in disability evaluation review your case, including your doctor's report. They will then decide whether you are disabled under the law.
Question: Other than being disabled, what do I have to do to qualify for disability benefits?
ANSWER: You have to have worked a certain amount in work covered by Social Security. You must have worked and received one quarter of coverage for each year between the year you reached age 22 and the year you became disabled. If you reached age 22 before 1951, then 1951 is substituted for the year you reached 22. Additionally, you have to work five of the last ten years before you became disabled. If you become disabled before age 30, there is a special insured status requirement which allows for the fact that you may not have been in the work force for the last ten years.

Question: If I wanted to file a claim for disability, what type of proofs would I need?
Answer: All disability applicants must be able to give sufficient information so that their medical sources can be contacted. In addition, most applicants must have proof of their age, proof of age for potentially eligible children, and proof of the previous year's earnings.
Question: How long will my disability benefits continue if I return to work?
Answer: Your benefits will continue at least three months after the month that is determined that you are no longer disabled; this usually is three months after you start working. I some cases a nine-month trial work period is allowed depending on the severity of your medical problem. If you return to work, you should notify the local Social Security office immediately. We are located in the W. R. Poage Federal Building in Temple, Texas.

TFU Officials Surprised At Hill's Ruling

Officials of Texas Farmers Union have expressed no surprise over the state attorney general's opinion that agricultural land cannot be taxed differently without passage of a constitutional amendment.

"Although we wanted very much to see some relief for farmers," said a spokesman, "we knew that all the desks in the world can't change the constitution. It takes the legislature and the voters to do that."

"We knew the issue was dead when the 65th Legislature passed House Bill 22 but failed to pass the necessary resolution for a constitutional amendment vote," said Jay Naman of Waco, President of the statewide general farm organization. "We feel that Attorney General John Hill was simply doing his job by ruling against the tax and that it was the Legislature which failed Texas farmers and ranchers by not completing its work during the regular session."

At issue is the shouting match between various state officials over whether agricultural land can be taxed according to its productivity rather than its market or speculative value. Both a law calling for the tax and a resolution allowing for constitutional change were introduced in the past session of the Legislature. Lawmakers, however, failed to pass the resolution which would have placed the matter before citizens during a constitutional amendment vote.

Changes Due For Calvert Cable TV Users

Western Cable TV is making changes in Calvert, according to Mike Cullen, owner. Equipment has been purchased which will add Channel 8, WFAA, to the service available 8 before Christmas. Channel 8 offers ABC programming and all-night movies.

Cullen also announced that the Calvert office for Western Cable will close Dec. 15. Subscribers will need to mail payments to the main office. The address is Western Cable Company, Box 662, Cameron, Texas.

Edward Barron will remain as serviceman. Cullen explains differences in cable services in the various towns served by Western Cable as having to do with height of the towers, distance of the towers from the station, and FCC regulations concerning such things as the year service was first established and population.

Plans are being made for a toll free number for the Cameron office for the convenience of customers.

Yoe girls basketball showed a 45-22 win over Austin Lanier and a 60-59 loss to Troy last week. Evelyn Pittman was high scorer with 27 at Troy and 25 at Lanier to lead Yoe players. Tullah Green hit 22 and 16 respectively both games.

Pam Kimbrel hit 14 in the two efforts.

Troy had a scoring sensation in Tammy Randolph who hit 41 points. Lanier's high scorer was T. Norman with 10 for comparison.

Lanier had previously beaten Yoe persons 54-53. This win came in the first round of the Round Rock tournament.

Vicki Brashear played a big defensive game against Lanier with 11 rebounds, followed by Vicky Brown with 11 rebounds and Ramona Kelley with 7.

3-3 Yoe Enters Second Round At Snook Tournament

Terry Lowe hit 15 points and Edward Johnson 18 for high score honors last week to lead the Yoemen to a 48-43 win over McGregor on the Bulldogs court.

It put Cameron at 3-3 on the year going into the Snook tournament where the Yoemen last Thursday won their opening game over Somerville, 53-44.

The Yoemen were to play Snook Friday in the second round for both teams.

Edward Johnson and Wayne Steamer shared high-point honors in the Somerville game with 15 points each, while Lowe hit 9 and Billy Pittman 7. Somerville's Baker hit 19 points in the losing effort.

Johnson drilled nine fieldgoals in the McGregor loss to Cameron. The game was won at the free-throw line with 14 for the Yoemen and five for McGregor.

Winter Recreation In Texas Requires Some Extra Preparation

Even though Texas has a reputation for mild winters, recreationists should be aware that variances are significant enough to warrant special preparation.

"There are two myths concerning winter recreation in Texas," according to Pat Taylor and Bob Evans. "One is that winters are mild enough to not require special preparation for outdoor recreation activities; the other is that there is no opportunity for 'snowbelt' recreation."

Taylor is a recreation and parks specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and Evans is a trail and waterway planner with the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

River recreationists, for example, should not assume that the same casual dress and behavior used on a canoe trip in July can be applied in January, note Taylor and Evans. Water levels on Texas' rivers often are higher in the winter while water temperatures are considerably lower.

The results of a spill could be more disastrous if one has not taken the precaution of packing extra clothes and matches in a sealed container (a double plastic trash bag will do.) The risk of hypothermia (severe lowering of body temperature) is much greater in winter, particularly in the spring-fed streams and rivers of Central and West Texas. This risk becomes quite serious when water temperature nears 50 degrees F. or lower.

As far as the snowbelt myth is concerned, Texas winters do offer opportunities for hiking, snowshoeing, ice skating or cross country skiing, point out the two recreation specialists. While long-lasting or severe cold is not dependable, it is not uncommon either, particularly west of a line from Wichita Falls to Del Rio.

Ice skating is the most risky activity, of course, and should not be done unless one has the knowledge and equipment for measuring thickness and strength of the ice.

Recreationists in the mountain country and in the Panhandle - South Plains region of the state normally have several opportunities each winter to ski tour, even if they never leave a city park or the neighborhood.

"With a little more commitment, coupled with at least a three-inch base, some interesting back country may be explored on snowshoes or cross country skis. Even if the country isn't interesting or new, the skiing is fun," say Taylor and Evans. "Obviously, the deeper the base, the better the traveling."

As for cold weather camping, they both agree that the same basic equipment utilized in the summer will suffice, with the possible exception of a slightly heavier sleeping bag. Recreationists west of the Wichita Falls - Del Rio line, however, should be prepared for the severe cold which is typical of winter in the desert, mountains and plains.

"In that region campers and day-use visitors alike should make preparations similar to a trip to the Rockies. In fact, with the fast movement of the Arctic cold fronts, coupled with the extreme variances normally found in desert settings, daily temperature ranges may be greater than those of the higher mountains," point out Taylor and Evans.

Traditional recreation activities such as swimming, canoeing and picnicking are seasonal in Texas. However, as social patterns change, such as year-round schools and the subsequent spreading of family vacation periods from summer to a twelve-month basis, more Texas recreationists will discover that many summer activities can be carried into the cooler months.

They will also discover that while Texas has little potential to develop a significant winter recreation industry, parts of the state do offer occasional opportunity for winter enjoyment without the expense of out-of-state travel, note the two recreation officials.

The first pole vaulter to clear the bar at 15 feet was Cornelius Warmerdam on April 13, 1940, in Berkeley, California.

Early Returns Show Deer Hunting Good

Deer season in Texas got off to a good start this year with good weather and lots of deer in most of the traditional deer hunting areas.

Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologists said the first two weekends, unlike last year, were mild and dry enough to lure a large number of hunters into the field.

In fact, the weather was too mild to suit some hunters, but in many areas the deer didn't need cold weather to keep them moving -- the rutting season and hard-to-find forage did that.

As usual, body conditions of deer varied from county to county and region to region. In the famous Hill Country the deer were mostly lean, but some of the bucks had good antler development.

There were more bucks to shoot at this year in the Hill Country, biologists say, because of the relatively low harvest of bucks during last year's cold, rainy season.

Elsewhere across the state, hunting was better than average in many areas.

Congressional Hopeful Chet Edwards To Meet The People

Chet Edwards, Congressional candidate for the 6th District, is traveling with his campaign assistant, John Oeffinger, in his campaign to "meet the people." His campaign is being conducted in this manner in order that Edwards can better determine the needs and concerns of the people within the 6th District.

Edwards is working at a variety of jobs as he travels. He plans to try his hand at 15 different jobs before next May. Since he began this campaign October 3, he has worked at a school for retarded children, and as a carpenter. He worked on Carroll Yezak's ranch in Bremond on Saturday. Among the one-day jobs he plans to try will be substitute teaching.

In an interview at the Calvert Hotel, Edwards said that, during this campaign, he has found that people are tired of too much government bureaucracy and red-tape, above all. He also has come to better understand the elderly and their needs.

Edwards has had experience with people in serving as Olin E. "Tiger" Teague's legislative assistant in Washington. In that capacity, he wrote summaries of bills and did research to help keep Teague informed. As District Administrative Assistant, Edwards lived in District 6 and served as "eyes and ears" for Teague to help keep in contact with the people.

A Congressman spends a lot of time helping individuals with problems, Edwards explained. Individual farmers, veterans with problems with their G.I. Bill, for example, come to their Congressman for assistance.

The 6th Congressional District covers Robertson, Brazos, Hill, Limestone, Navarro, Ellis, and Johnson counties as well as parts of Dallas, Tarrant, and Parker counties.

If all the gold owned by mankind was formed into a single block of gold, it would measure a mere 18 cubic yards on each side—though we've been digging for the precious metal for 6,000 years.

Awards Given To Calvert Cystic Fibrosis Workers

Jodie Lee Key, chairman of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation drive which was recently conducted in Calvert, awarded certificates to volunteers who assisted in the campaign. The group met at the Calvert Dairy Queen Thursday December 8 at 4 p.m. Refreshments were selected to be enjoyed prior to the awarding of the certificates. Mrs. Key read a letter of thanks from the North-East Texas Chapter president, Houston S. Holmes, Jr.

Those attending who received certificates were Jean Anderson, Mrs. Bertha B. Woods, Mrs. Jessie Mae Stroud, Mrs. Cora Lee Hayward, Carolyn Koehler, Mrs. Nancy Perkins, Mrs. M. J. Perry, Mrs. Josie Jones, Mrs. Jodie Lee Key, Yvette Perkins, Cecilia Heinrich, and Joni Heinrich.

Baylor Accepts 1200 For Freshman Class

About 1200 students have been accepted for next fall's freshman class at Baylor University, according to Doug Thomas, director of admissions at Baylor. Thomas said his office began notifying prospective students of their acceptance or rejection on Nov. 1.

The freshman class is expected to include about 50 percent men and 50 percent women. Thomas said Baylor "makes every effort to keep the ratio balanced between men and women."

Tax Representative To Be In Cameron

Bicycle Safety Plan Due Development

A comprehensive bicycle safety plan for Texas will be developed during a conference December 8 and 9 at Sam Houston State University in Huntsville. The Texas program is part of a national effort by the U. S. Department of Transportation and the U. S. Consumer Product Safety Commission to encourage each state to develop and implement a safety plan.

In addition to the federal agencies, the Texas Conference will be sponsored by the Texas Office of Traffic Safety, Texas Department of Public Safety, Texas Education Agency, Texas Safety Association and Region VI Education Service Center.

Approximately 100 attendees to the Texas Conference will represent the leadership of safety councils, civic and state organizations, regional federal offices, enforcement and education personnel, traffic safety programs, insurance industry representatives and others concerned with bicycle safety. Their purpose will be to develop the Texas plan and provide leadership for the implementation of the plan to the organizations and communities they represent. Agenda items will include a review of the proceedings of the National Bicycle Safety Education conference held in Washington, D. C., in May and identifying Texas needs in bicycle safety education. The group will also identify available resources in Texas and address formulation of the plan and implementation methods.

"My electric bill keeps going up. Why?"

REASON ONE The cost of new generating plants. Even though many people are reducing their usage of electricity, Texas Power & Light must build new generating plants. These plants—which use lignite coal and nuclear materials as fuel—are necessary to phase out use of natural gas and fuel oil, and to meet the electricity needs of homes, businesses and industries. TP&L construction expenditures for plants and other facilities are expected to total some $279 million in 1977 and $326 million in 1978.

REASON TWO The cost of fuel for generating plants. Lignite-fueled plants now in operation are reducing TP&L's dependence on expensive gas and oil. However, when use of air conditioning skyrockets the demand for electricity during the summer, gas-fueled plants must supply more power. When supplies of gas are curtailed during the winter, oil must be used to meet the demand.

REASON THREE The cost of environmental equipment. TP&L recognizes its responsibility to help protect the cleanliness of the air and water. Within the bounds of a reasonable balance of costs and benefits, the Company has been fulfilling this responsibility for many years. Now, State and Federal regulations require installation of environmental equipment on generating plants. At one new plant, air quality control devices will add some $76 million to the cost of the plant, and increase the cost of electricity produced at this plant 15 to 20 per cent. Texas Power & Light is working to assure an adequate and dependable supply of electricity to its customers. And, in the face of constantly rising costs of producing and supplying electricity, we're working to keep your cost as low as possible.

Health Planning Revisions To Protect Rural Hospitals

"I have been concerned that the proposed guidelines might force small rural hospitals or community hospitals to close and that the standards applying to obstetrical units may be too strict."

"In addition, Secretary Califano stated that nothing in the guidelines would take decisions about individual medical facilities out of local hands and that the guidelines will not require any local agency, any state agency or any federal agency to close any hospital or hospital services," Bentzen said.

IT REALLY HAPPENED!

One night, when famed actor John Barrymore was playing Shakespeare's "Richard III," he shouted his agonized plea, "A horse! A horse! My kingdom for a horse!" A cougher in the balcony came in on cue and threatened to steal the scene. Barrymore added, without missing a beat, "Make haste and saddle yonder braying ass!"

Another time, during a flu epidemic, when coughing in the theater reached beyond an actor's wildest nightmare, Barrymore took a five-pound sea bass from beneath his cloak and flung it at the audience. "Busy yourself with this, you walrus, while the rest of us proceed with the libretto!"

Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, once programmed a performance of Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture" which climaxed with the firing of 105mm howitzers, the ringing of eight amplified English chain bells cued in by walkie-talkie from a nearby belfry and the explosion of 200 titanium firecracker salutes. It was rumored that it was a conductor's revenge for coughers in Boston's Symphony Hall. An easier way to stop the coughing could have been to pass out Halls Cough Tablets, which almost half the people who buy cough tablets prefer for temporary relief of minor throat irritation and for making nasal passages feel clearer.

Poachers Pay For 'Too Early' Deer

The crisp days of fall are the signal for outdoor enjoyment to most hunters... and for wanton slaughter of wildlife to a few others.

Game wardens of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department caught three men in South Texas recently who not only were killing deer before the season opened, but also were sawing off the antlers and leaving carcasses to rot in the brush.

District law enforcement supervisor John Caudle of Laredo was hiding in the brush near a road where there had been some suspected poaching activity when three men drove up. Two got out, and the truck drove on. The pair walked a short distance and one of them fired at a deer. Caudle waited until the poachers had sawed the antlers off the buck and were returning to the road, and then arrested them.

The third man was arrested as he drove back to the point where he had left his partners.

The trio admitted killing six deer. The carcasses of two were recovered and donated to charitable organizations.

The men were charged with two counts each of failure to keep edible portions of wild deer, three counts each of hunting in closed season, and one count each of possession of deer in closed season. The fines and court costs came to $4,500 for the three.

In another South Texas case, three hunters from Louisiana were caught with 403 bobwhite and blue quail in their possession after a three-day shooting on a leased area.

They paid more than $4,000 in fines after being charged with five counts of exceeding the possession limit of quail and one count each of hunting without a valid license.

An orphan's home at Laredo heartily enjoyed the quail, which were carefully cleaned and iced down by the poachers prior to their arrest, wardens said.

Roy Law To Receive Honorary Degree From Mary Hardin-Baylor

C. R. (Roy) Law of Cameron will be honored at commencement at Mary Hardin-Baylor College on December 17 at 1:30 p.m. when the honorary doctor of humanities degree will be conferred upon him.

Law has lived in or near Cameron for 83 years. He was tax collector of Milam County for ten years, then continued in ad valorem tax work and business for 43 years, retiring in 1963.

A member of First Baptist Church in Cameron for more than 63 years, he has served as deacon and Sunday School superintendent.

Law served Mary Hardin-Baylor College as trustee for three consecutive 3-year terms and has been a loyal benefactor for many years.

Law and his wife Ella live with their son on the family farm near Cameron. Their other two sons are now deceased. They have two granddaughters and two grandsons.

The Central Texas Red Cross bloodmobile will be in Cameron on Wednesday, December 14 from 12 noon until 6 p.m. at the Methodist Fellowship Hall. The quota for this visit will be 73 units.

Mrs. Glenda Moseley, blood program chairman for Cameron, said this is a very important visit as Cameron is behind its quota for the year.

The holiday season always brings with it a greater need for blood, with more traffic accidents in the area. Seasonal illnesses also cause a shortage of donors, so anyone who is able to donate a unit is urged to come on Wednesday.

As long as Cameron remains in the blood program by donating sufficient units, residents can have their blood needs, along with their relatives' needs, met by the Red Cross blood program.
